

European Journal of Personality (EJP) is looking for a Research Communication Assistant (RSA)

We are looking for an up-and-coming and well-connected personality researcher who is eager to organize and realize EJP's media communication in coordination with EJP's Research Communication Editor and Editor-in-Chief.

RSA will be responsible for promotion of the high-quality articles published or to be published in EJP by means of newsletters, social media activities, interviews and press releases.

We are looking for:

- a rising star in personality science
- with good writing skills
- with social media experience (or a willingness to learn)
- with broad background in personality research
- and who is well connected to personality researchers around the globe

Job tasks (in coordination with Research Communication Editor):

- prepare brief article summaries
- edit EJP newsletter and ejp-blog.com
- promote EJP articles on social media in collaboration with authors' institutions
- carry out interviews with authors and post them on ejp-blog.com
- attempt to introduce EJP articles to general media
- follow social media channels of relevant other disciplines and build links them
- help with podcast affiliated with EJP, in co-ordination with its host

Desired personality traits:

- reliability, diligence, friendliness and respectfulness
- independent work attitude but is not afraid to ask for help
- ability to initiate new contacts
- willingness to offer new ideas and implement these

What do we offer?

- Close contact and cooperation with leading personality researchers
- Excellent networking opportunities within and beyond research community
- A salary of 4,080€/year
- Exemption from European Association of Personality Psychology membership and European Conference on Personality attendance fees

We expect the RSA to work 6 to 8 hours a week and the contract will be effective until 30.09.2024.

If you are interested, please contact EJP's Editor-in-Chief René Möttus (ejp.eic@gmail.com) within November 15th sending:

- your CV
- a brief letter of motivation

The selection interview will happen online via Zoom.